Description: The Baer canyon trail is an awesome hiking trail but is a little tougher than average. This trail is also the site of the infamous Baer Gutsman race, a 10-mile mountain race held here each year in August. Baer Canyon is also a nice approach to the Great Western Trail and Mt. Francis. This trail is still one of the undiscovered wonders of the Wasatch mountains. Hiking this trail, one enjoys the peaceful sounds of the creek cascading its way down the mountain. Small picnic or camp spots can be found along the way to rest or spend the night. The trail is steepest near the top but the reward is incredible when you see the view of the Great Salt Lake and the mountains to the west. So whether you are training for an extreme endurance race or just a lazy hike in the mountains, you can find it on the Baer trail.

 Trailhead Location: From Highway 89 in the Kaysville Fruit Heights area, turn on to Mountain road, proceed east on East Oaks drive. Turn left on 1800 East. At the end of the road, you will see a sign that reads "Baer Trail Head parking". Turn right; you will find good parking at the top of a steep lane where the trail begins.
